LANGUAGE & CULTURE

Tiv is a Niger-Congo language. Although there are some minor dialectal differences in accents between different geographic areas, the language is more or less homogenous. The Tiv is the only language in Nigeria that is without any significant dialectical variations. Tiv is sometimes referred to as Munshi by Fulani people, but this term is considered derogatory by the Tivs. Although Christianity is becoming increasingly popular, many Tiv people still practice their traditional religion. The Tiv are primarily agriculturalists both for trade and sustenance. The major crops are yams, sorghum and millet. They also grow maize, groundnuts, rice, cowpeas, beans, okra, peppers, onions and tomatoes.

The Tiv have a lasting musical culture and legacy. There are several instruments unique to the Tiv people. Kakaki is a horn-like instrument used to send messages to the community. The Ilyu is a light wooden instrument used to announce death. Indyer is a heavy mahogany instrument used at celebrations and festivals. Tiv drums are called Agbande. Adiguve is a stringed instrument that is also used at celebrations and festivals.

WHO SPEAKS TIV

Tiv people trace their lineage back through one common predecessor named Tiv and his children that were believed to have originated from Southern Africa. Common ancestor of all the Tiv people, therefore, is a man named Tiv. He had two sons named Ichongo and Ipusu. And they formed the major clans among the Tiv people. These clans are based on patrilineage. The Tiv organized themselves into villages called Tar that were comprised of small groups of related clans (ipaven). Tiv were also known for their traditional system of exchanged marriage which was outlawed by the British in 1927. This system caused a lot of disputes which was part of the reason for its elimination by the British.

Tiv traditional religion, which is still practiced today, is based on the concept of Gba-aondo, which means the world should be as it was made by god. Another important notion in Tiv traditional religion is Chia-itan, declaration of innocence among young clan members. Magical forces were seen as intrigues and manipulations among people. According to Tiv, God is not concerned with these magical forces. The Tiv do not worship any objects whether animate or in animate, but they believe that God is the greatest power, seconded by witchcraft and the ground on which we stand. The treatment for misfortunes that arise from witchcraft is called Akombo. The akombo treatment unties any spiritual effect that witchcraft has on a person.

WHY STUDY TIV

Tiv is a Nigerian language with over five million speakers. The language is most highly concentrated in Benue state, although it is spread throughout Nigeria’s middle belt and the eastern regions. There is also a small Tiv speaking population in Cameroon. Tiv is taught in some primary schools and colleges of education in Benue State. Although the Tiv people make up only 2.5% of Nigeria’s population, they are a large and pertinent ethnic group in the country. Students may wish to study Tiv in order to communicate with one of the Nigeria’s largest ethnic groups. Students studying African History and anthropology may also find the language useful.
